

George Simmons Barn

Here is another certified Century Old farm which means that it has been in the same family for over 100 years. Barn built by the George Simmons family in 1915 for hay storage and cow stanchions. It took 2 years to build.

In 1947, George Simmons died. At that time, the Maxfields purchased the farm from the estate. Wilma Maxfield is a granddaughter of George Simmons.

The north side lean-to caved in and was replaced by Linden and he also put on the metal roof. The south side of the barn houses antiques.

For several years, Mr. Maxfield took groups on hay rides and the north side addition was a party room for those groups. Now it is a family party room where the members of the family can get together. The northwest corner is still a horse stable. It is a treat to look into these old barns and this one is very interesting.

Information given by Wilma and Linden Maxfield to Florine Whiting.

Kennel entertained the Ben Laker Club on Feb. 17 at the home of Darlene Shelton.

The invocation was given by Merle Davis and the minutes of the meeting held in January were read by NaDene Probst and approved by the club members. Since the 17th happened to be NaDene's birthday, the group joined in singing happy birthday to her.

Lila Mae Johnson introduced Audrey Probst, who gave us some of the enlightening and interesting literary talents of three men:

Francois Rabelais, 1495 - 1553; Honore De balzac, 1799 - 1850, and Geoffrey Chaucer, 1343 - 1400.

- Rabelais was a Benedictine monk and physician but wrote several books about giants in the middle ages.

- Balzac wrote many volumes which comprised his masterpiece, La Come'die Humaine.

the ages wrote the Canterbury Tales. Many are familiar with these. They are written in old English and it was interesting to read it and compare with English today. Then Audrey read of the Canterbury Tales and everyone enjoyed it.

Audrey was born in Heber on the 19th of February and has lived her entire life in Heber or Midway except three years in Texas while Wayne was in the Air Force and the three years they were on their mission in Idaho. One of her "claims to fame" was that she had a baby, Kim, who only cost $25. She has six children and 17 grandchildren.

Some of her hobbies are tending grandkids (when they can catch her home), reading, gardening, traveling with Wayne and her Temple work. She loves good music and good movies, which are getting hard to find. Audrey loves people and is loved in return.

McKayla Marie McPhie

Scott and Aimee McPhie are proud to announce the arrival of their new baby girl McKayla Marie McPhie. She was born on Dec. 31, 1997. She weighed 7 lbs. 5 ozs. and was 19 inches long. She also has a big sister, Lacie.

Her grandparents are Joe and Gaye McPhie and Fred and Joyce Hardman. Her great-grandparents are Marvis and Johnnie Clyde, Earl and Jean Hardman, and Maud McPhie.
